

FUN GAMES FOR KIDS

blowing cotton bats

2 teams of 3 take it turns from each other at a table to blow foam bats. A cotton ball must be blown off the other side of the table. The players are not allowed to use their hands to touch the cotton ball, when a big gust is blowing on a second cotton ball.

cotton ball teamfun

The player is blindfolded and has a ball full of cotton balls on the top being only a wooden spoon, he must touch the cotton balls out of the bowl on the top and put them into an empty bowl that is on the floor. How many cotton balls can he transfer while one minute!

floating on air

What team or duo can make a balloon float in the air the longest by only blowing on it with their mouth to keep the balloon floating?

squash balloon

The player must go through an obstacle course balancing a potato on a string, about 40cm in a square.

maximally busy relay

Taking a game to the next level, mixed mathematics or math's must be carried from a short race over the finishing line, how many minutes can the group keep it in the relay, how many minutes? At the end of the race, the number can be taken.

scatops and stanzas

One person is blindfolded. A second person answers a question. The first person must find the second person to find out what position he/she must play. This can be played across several teams.

scramble word creation

From one long word as many small words as possible should be written down.

(scrambled text, not legible)

20 questions

1. Choose one person to start. The person must think of an object. To make the game easier, he or she can choose the object, an animal, vegetable or mineral.
2. Then another player asks a question about the object that can be answered yes or no.
3. The person who has the object in mind should answer the question with a simple yes or no.
4. After having the answer, the questioner is allowed to guess the object. The players are allowed to ask a total of 20 questions.
5. If the guess is correct, the winning questioner now thinks of a new object. If the answer is incorrect, another player is allowed to ask a question as well.

guess, guess, guess

Like the game, take it turn in a circle being next other. One person is "X" and another around the circle. As they walk around they tap people heads and say whether they are a "boy" or a "girl". Once someone in the "guess" they get up and try to show "X" around the circle. The goal is to tap that person before they are able to do so in the "guess" spot. If the guess is not able to do so they become "X" for the next round and play continues. If they do tap the "X" person, the person tapped has to do in the center of the circle. Then the guess becomes X for the next round. The person in the middle must leave until another person is tapped and they are replaced.

Like our books, these stories need outlines and details and even details of paper to make things done they must use to keep them from being the "sit-down" getting when by "books" or "outlines" by a "teacher". As they make their way through the books, they can pretend that they are walking or running "home". They share and after can also be combined with games for what the end of a book of reading, encourage kids to make up a story to go along with the game.

That gets to the knees

A person stands in a line with a long string to the center of a player who stands on a chair. The player must, being asked to get the person a letter which is placed on the floor.

Hot and cold

One player leaves the room, while the "X" object is hidden. One small object like a whistle or a balloon. The player comes back and everyone in the room directs the player by telling her/him that they are either "hot" or "cold" depending whether they are getting closer to the hidden object.

button, button, who's got the button?

The children all stand in a circle with their hands out, palms together. One child, called the leader or "X", takes a button hiddenly provided by an adult and goes around the circle, putting their hands in everyone's other hands one by one. In one person's hands they stay the button, though they continue to put their hands in the others so that no one knows where the button is except for the player and musician.

Whatabout challenge

Write the leader in the next story on a piece of paper, put them in a box or bag and challenge his/her to be complete without using their hands. Ideas to include about the action, the other players must include ideas. If there any other "to do" while playing the action, the other players are not allowed to include their hands. Anyone who does so is out of the game. Players must also keep out of the bag to include a certain action when they're required to.

sinus says

One person says "sinus" and the others stand facing the other leaders the others to perform an action by saying "sinus says" in the "sinus" introduction what it is to be done. The other children must include ideas. If there any other "to do" while playing the action, the other players are not allowed to include their hands. Anyone who does so is out of the game. Players must also keep out of the bag to include a certain action when they're required to.
