OUR KITCHEN

There are few people in our country who do not have a kitchen. It is the heart of the home, and the place where the family life is centered. It is the place where the mother of the family spends most of her time, and where she does the work of the household. It is the place where the children are taught to be helpful and obedient, and where they learn the value of labor. It is the place where the father of the family can find rest and refreshment after a day's work. It is the place where the family can gather together and enjoy each other's company. It is the place where the family can find comfort and convenience. It is the place where the family can find happiness and contentment. It is the place where the family can find a home.

Directions.—Cut out the different pieces, being careful to preserve the exact shape indicated by dot (•) or dashed lines; partly open with hand of a knife—find all parts having dotted lines; first having distinguished by dotted back and attached to the back by means of a little glue. Flaps not having dot to be spread, thus forming a seam.
