

Dad, the Legend

Roses are red, violets are blue,
No one tells dad jokes quite like you.
They're cheesy, they're loud, sometimes a bit bad,
But somehow they're perfect—because you're my dad.

You fix all the things... or at least you try,
With tape and a "hmm..." and a confident sigh.
A 5-minute job turns into half the day,
But hey, in the end—you still save the day.

You nap like a pro, on the couch or a chair,
Turn on the TV—next minute, you're not there.
And somehow you wake when snacks are around,
Like dad-superpowers that cannot be found.

So here's to you, Dad, funny and true,
A little bit silly—but we love you.
No matter your jokes or things that you do,
Happy Father's Day—we're lucky it's you!
